

About Columbia Springs

Columbia Springs provides environmental education opportunities for the community and students of all ages through on-site and outreach programs.

Last school year more than 7,500 Clark County students and chaperones visited Columbia Springs for field trips and service learning activities offered through our on-site education programs.

Columbia Springs is located on one hundred acres of urban green space and shares the campus with the historic Vancouver Trout Hatchery.

The campus includes an indoor classroom, an outdoor shelter and walking trails. Visitors can enjoy walking the nature trails, observing birds and wildlife, and visiting a working hatchery.

On-site environmental education activities are available to all schools and the site is open to the public from dawn until dusk daily.
